

ABSTRACT

Transistor isolation is improved by eliminating the channeling tail of an N well implant. To do this, a low dose, high energy implant of an oppositely charged dopant ion is implanted, targeted at the depth of the channeling tail.